The last page in the guided report is the analyst’s assessment page. Here we provide the report name, or if you do not have one, that can be out of generated. We'll call it report one.

You can add any contextual details that you feel were not captured in the previous form pages, and this is a free text block, so you can add report details here.

Finally, if there are external references that support your report, you can add them here, such as source name, URLs, hash values, and external IDs of other objects if you have them.

Once those are placed in the modal, you can click add, and they'll be added to your report. That's the final step in creating the guided report.
